Guided tour to the Capitolini Museums

The Capitolini Museums date from 1471, when Pope Sixtus IV donated to the People of Rome a group of bronze statues that until then had been at the Lateran. Successive Popes enlarged the original core collection with works found during excavations, from the Vatican and purchased specifically for this museum. Around the middle of the 18th century Pope Benedict XIV founded the Capitoline Picture Gallery.

The museums’ collections are displayed in two of the three buildings that enclose Piazza del Campidoglio: Palazzo dei Conservatori and Palazzo Nuovo. The two buildings are linked by an underground tunnel which houses the Epigraphic Gallery and lead into the ancient Tabularium, whose monumental arches overlook the Roman Forum.

The Palazzo Nuovo houses the collections of ancient sculptures, including a famous collection of busts of ancient philosophers and Roman Emperors.

On the first floor of the Palazzo dei Conservatori, a large recently-build glassroofed hall houses the ancient equestrian statue of Marcus Aurelius and the imposing remains of the Temple of Jupiter. On the second floor, the Capitoline Picture Gallery’s works are arranged in chronological order from the late Middle Ages to the 18th Century. They include two paintings by Caravaggio, a very large canvas by Guercino and a good number of works by Guido Reni and Pietro da Cortona.

Following the visit of the Capitolini Museums, we will enjoy a Party Dinner on the Terrazza Caffarelli. Located inside the beautiful Palace hosting the Capitoline Museums, the Terrazza Caffarelli is an exclusive luxury location overlooking the artistic, urban and architectural wonders of the Capital City, offering a panoramic view amongst the most fascinating ones in Rome.

The Terrace offers unique scenery on top of the city and looks over Rome. From Altare della Patria (Altar of Homeland) to the dome of St Peter’s, the Terrazza Caffarelli towers over with its elegance and style, in a mix of past and present that makes room for the adornments of the Palace and keeps its ancient touch unchanged.

At the end of the Party two shuttle buses are available for transfer back to Radisson Blue Hotel and to Villa Miani.
